Eastern Aleutian Tribes is seeking qualified applicants for a Information Technology Manager.

Working together to promote healthy communities

Working with and through a team, the Information Technology Manager is responsible for managing EAT's network, telecom, audio/visual systems, hardware and software applications and health information technology. The incumbent will audit, review and report on stability, usage, and vulnerabilities to ensure network and systems are reliable and secure. This is no small feat considering the number of facilities, their remote geographic locations, and the inherent logistical challenges. Strong technical skills in networks, A/V, telecom and health information systems, combined with project management and planning are critical for success.

The incumbent will lead, direct and evaluate the IT team to assure quality service and support for all facilities throughout the region. This assumes the ability to motivate, encourage and sustain positive interpersonal relationships while achieving business objectives. That being said, ideal candidates will have proven leadership abilities.
